With this you can create an easy to use graphical interface, it will be easy for you to record, view, and transfer data back and forth and even view the events and data on your device. A similar program can be used in Android phones, and tablet computers, allowing you to see the data as if you were on your device, so you can even do this when the phone is in a certain position. I have used the Windows version of the program, but it is also available for other platforms, such as Android and IOS. Conclusion {#S4} ===== Since nowadays the amount of data obtained from single people is enormous, even in health care, the main role of the big data analytics for a future is to improve our health, lifestyle, and decrease cost of production. As healthcare professionals we need to be trained to use tools in order to contribute more to prevent or diagnose a disease in its early phase. Health science education needs to be adapted to the future, it is not about memorizing but to be able to detect the differences between the modern world and the past with our knowledge and experience and to explore new ways to collaborate and manage the data more efficiently. When training to work with big data technology, the best model to be used will be open access, collaborative, and "playful," where the student can learn to work with new data and be trained in a project, helping society in a certain task. Future must be a society that enjoys life more and at the same time takes care of each other, not just the rich and famous. With all the technological advancements we have been used to, we should expect more from our future.
